RYAN LIQUOR CASE

A HUMILIATING FARCE. So Declares Judge Brown When He Discharges Accused-Remedy Sug-

In the city court Saturday morning, Judge Brown handed down his decision in the case against W. E. Ryan, charged with violation of the Sunday liquor law. In his finding he said: The accused is not presented on a charge of selling on a week day, but for a violation of the law on Sunday. The fact that the accused has his appeal now pending in the superior court and that there has been any unreasonable delay in the hearts of the reasonable delay in the hearing of that appeal ought not to prejudice the ccurt in the case on trial. The ques-tion here is, has the state proved its

After reviewing the testimony he After reviewing the testimony he discharged the accused.

He also said: Although it may not have very much to do with the question of guilt or innocence of the accused and should be considered mainly in determining the degree of punishment indicted, if found guilty, I will make a brief statement concerning this case:

The accused was prior to November

The accused was, prior to November The accused was, prior to November 1, 1908, a duly licensed dealer in spirituous and intoxicating liquors at 65 West Main street in this city. His license expired at that time. I understand he made an application in proper form for a renewal of his license for the same place, which application was considered by the county commissioners as provided by statute. A remonstrance was filed by certain citizens on the ground that the applicant was an unfit person to be licensed cant was an unfit person to be lice and also that the location was im-proper for the sale of spirituous li-quors. Upon a full hearing, both sides being represented by counsel, the com-missioners refused to grant the li-

An appeal to the superior court was at once taken by the applicant and the case is now there upon the docket, sleeping as quietly as though it was the sleep of death, apparently with no one to moiest or make afraid. The result is that the accused, being refused a license, has been doing business at the "old stand" for seven months.

Now, if my eng publicity this case should be tried and the decision of the country commissioners sustained, then, whether or not this man, together with his bondsman, will contest liability to pay to the authorities any compensation for the past, remains to be seen. If they should succeed in avoiding payment of any money except to their counsel, what will be the feeling of the regularly licensed dealers who have paid their money for a like privilege?

The law as it has been applied in this case is nothing more than a farce, and no one can laugh more heartlly at its defects than the accused in this case. months

What is the defect in this case,

What is the defect in this case, which has given immunity from prosecution to this accused six days every week for seven months?

The statutes places the hearing on such appeals in a preferred class before a judge holding any regular term of court or before a judge in vacation to be called in for a special trial of the case, so that it would seem it was possible to have secured a court for a speedy trial of this case.

There seems to be one defect at least in the present statute—that it makes no provision for a prosecutor to look after the interests of the public. It says the county commissioners or any taxpayer may enter in the case; any taxpayer may enter in the case; but if they do this, they would natur-ally subject themselves to the expense ally subject themselves to the expense of counsel; and any taxpayer so entering to defend, in the event of an adverse decision, to a bill of costs.

So the chances are, as in this case, that no one cares to go to the expense of appearing in the case in opposition to the applicant for the license. Consequently, what has happened in this case is the natural result. Of course, this applicant is easy, so long as he is allowed to continue his business unrolested, and his counsel will never urge the trial of the case because this is against the interests of his client. There is a remedy at least for this serious defect in the present law. If

There is a remedy at least for this serious defect in the present law. If the applicant for the renewal of his license is to be allowed the right to continue in the business until his appeal is heard, then it should be made the duty of the state's attorney to enter and press the appeal to a speedy irial, looking out for the interests of the public. The public would then be spared the humiliation of suc ha farce as the present case presents. as the present case presents.
